APPRENTICESHIPS

Apprenticeships are work-based training programmes that include on-and-off-the-job training.

THIS INSTALLATION IS NOT TO BE ENERGISED

APPRENTICESHIPS

Apprenticeships are work-based training programmes that include on-and-off-the-job training.

- Apprentices must be employed for at least 30 hours per week
- Include formal and informal, on-and-off-the-job training
- Contain nationally recognised qualifications defined by employers
- Last for 1-2 years and sometimes longer
- Include the minimum wage

And most of all, apprentices are flexible and will support your business needs. Apprenticeships are not just for school leavers, but they can support people of all ages to a career in a new job.

Apprenticeships are available in a huge range of occupations, from Level 2 through to degree apprenticeships. All sectors and job roles are covered and there are new apprenticeships being developed all the time.

New apprenticeship 'trailblazers' and 'standards' are being developed by employers, making them even more relevant for industry.

There's now more flexibility than ever for you to work with us to develop the right delivery model for your business. We can wrap additional activities and qualifications around your existing training provision to create a full apprenticeship programme. Alternatively, we can design and deliver the complete training programme, which will consist of on-the-job training at work and attending classes at college.

The number of classes depends on their role, the qualification and how experienced they are. Typically an apprentice might spend four days at work and one day in college each week, however, some apprenticeships are studied completely in the workplace and you will be need to complete work placed projects, portfolios and assessments, and undertake regular reviews with your employer.
